Foreign Language and Area Studies (FLAS) fellowships support undergraduate and graduate students who will study Bengali, Hindi, Persian, Punjabi, and Urdu and other modern South Asian languages as an integral part of an academic program focusing on South Asia. Applicants must be U.S. citizens or have permanent resident status, and must be applying to, or currently enrolled in a Columbia undergraduate or graduate degree program in order to apply for an Academic Year fellowship.

Competitive priorities for the Academic Year 2020-21 FLAS competition include students who will achieve an advanced level proficiency by the time of graduation; and students who demonstrate financial need via the FAFSA.

Undergraduate 2020-21 FLAS fellowships: $10,000 in tuition and a stipend of $5,000.

Graduate 2020-21 FLAS fellowships: $18,000 in tuition and a stipend of $15,000.

See guidelines (over) and the South Asia Institute website (below) for full details.

All applicants apply on-line at the following address:
https://fellowships-apply.gsas.columbia.edu/apply/

Application deadline: February 26, 2020, before 1:00pm
General Guidelines for Foreign Language and Area Studies (FLAS) Graduate Fellowships

1. All awards are subject to U.S. Department of Education (USED) guidelines.

2. Applicants must be U.S. citizens or have permanent resident status.

3. Eligible languages of study at Columbia during the Academic Year are Bengali, Hindi, Persian, Punjabi, Tamil, or Urdu. Applicants may apply to study other modern South Asia languages for Summer FLAS.

4. Students in undergraduate and graduate degree-granting programs at Columbia and Barnard Colleges, and the Schools of Engineering and General Studies, and at GSAS, SIPA and Teacher’s College and the School of Public Health are eligible to apply for Academic Year FLAS. Students in all schools are eligible to apply for Summer awards. Competitive priority will be given to applicants who demonstrate financial need by filing a FAFSA form.

5. Students may study at the Intermediate or Advanced level. Students in Heritage Hindi or Heritage Urdu may apply for both Fall and Spring terms. Study at the Elementary level is not allowed, with one exception. Students who are able to document Advanced proficiency in one South Asian language may apply to study a second South Asia language at the Elementary level. Competitive priority will be given to students who plan to achieve an advanced proficiency in their target language before graduation.

6. All applications must include a statement of purpose, a current transcript, and two letters of recommendation. Applicants studying at the Intermediate or Advanced level must submit an evaluation from a Language Instructor. Submission of FAFSA is optional for application, and all files will be reviewed with or without FAFSA.

7. Fellows must submit post-award performance reports, and take pre- and post-award proficiency exams. Fellows must agree to submit bi-annual reports, for a ten-year period following graduation, on career activities or subsequent education, and use of the target language (all reports submitted on-line directly to the USED).

Academic Year 2020-2021 Awards

1. Fellows must have full-time status or full-time equivalency status in 2020-21. Both current students and incoming applicants to Columbia may apply for Academic Year FLAS.

2. All Academic Year FLAS fellows must have a FAFSA form on file.

3. Fellows must enroll in at least one language course and one South Asia area studies course each semester.

For further information, please contact William Carrick at <wac2112@columbia.edu>.

Application deadline: February 26, 2020, before 1:00pm